Forms of Discrimination

- 3.1. Discrimination by or against a member of staff is generally prohibited unless there is a specific legal exemption. Discrimination may be direct or indirect and it may occur intentionally or unintentionally.
 - Direct Discrimination - This occurs when a person is treated unfairly or less favourably because of one or more of the protected characteristics. Apart from limited exceptions to the general prohibition of discrimination, direct discrimination is automatically unlawful, whatever the reason for it. There can be no justification for the difference in treatment.
 - Associative Discrimination – This occurs where a person is directly discriminated against or harassed for association with another person who has a protected characteristic (the exception to this is harassment because of marriage and civil partnership, and pregnancy and maternity as it is not covered).
 - Discrimination by Perception -This occurs where a person is directly discriminated against or harassed based on a perception that the person has a particular protected characteristic, when in fact they do not (the exception to this is marriage and civil partnership, and pregnancy and maternity as it is not covered).
 - Indirect Discrimination – This occurs where a provision, criteria or practice is applied that appears to affect everyone equally but which in fact puts people who share a protected characteristic at a disadvantage.
 - Harassment – This occurs when someone behaves in such a way that their conduct has the purpose or effect of creating an environment that is offensive, hostile, degrading, humiliating or intimidating for a person where
 - This is related to a protected characteristic (except pregnancy and maternity or marriage or civil partnerships)
 - This is of a sexual nature (sexual harassment)
 - a person is treated less favourably because they have either submitted to or rejected sexual harassment, or harassment related to sex or gender reassignment (this is known as 'consequential harassment').

- Victimisation – is also prohibited. This occurs when a person experiences disadvantage because they have supported someone in making a complaint or an allegation of discrimination or because they personally have made an allegation of discrimination.
